

Babygooroo

<http://www.babygooroo.com/>

Milk Trays a Convenient Storage Device

April 23, 2007 by Amy | 1 Comment or Question

If you'd like an alternative to storing your breast milk in bags and bottles, you might want to consider Milk Trays. This new device was the feature of a recent post on Motherwear's Breastfeeding Blog, where it was given a rave review.

According to the reviewer, "Milk Trays were designed by a breastfeeding mother who works as a firefighter paramedic. The trays have 8 one-ounce cavities for freezing milk in small portions. They're made from medical grade plastic and have lids to prevent freezer burn. Unlike an ice cube tray, the frozen 'milk sticks' fit through the mouth of any bottle opening."

Categories: Breast milk, Working and Breastfeeding, Breast Pumps

One Response to "Milk Trays a Convenient Storage Device"

Laura Says:

April 23, 2007, at 4:10 pm

I am a working mom and love my Milk Trays!...I used to use nurser bags and was very frustrated with first of all the amount of milk I THREW AWAY!!! and second some of my bags leaked wasting MORE! I freeze extra milk in the cute 1oz Milk Sticks and then store them in a freezer safe ziplock bag! It is so easy and I have like 40oz in just two ziplock bags.. I can actually use my freezer for other foods as well. You can tell that these were invented by working/pumping moms! Thanks again Slim Lines for a great product!